

For realizing efficient and comfortable mobility for all passengers, integrated and effective strategies on transport need to be planned, considering others such as on landuse and welfare.

A typical flowchart for formulating the integrated transport policy and strategies is as follows:

During preliminary surveys to a draft transport plan, several projects of transport facilities need to be selected, considering those relationships and physical networks as the following figure:

On formulating the draft transportation plan, schemes for implementation need to be selected.

For example, when land acquisition would be difficult for widening an urban road, some specific schemes like the land readjustment one, as the following figure, need to be selected:

